

Bogus Financial Requests

The Financial Services Authority is aware of a number of bogus communications claiming to be from the Financial Services Authority (FSA) or the Financial Ombudsman Service (FOS) – which ask the recipient for personal information or money.

The bogus communications are often in the form of letters or email and they sometimes use the name of a current or former employee. It is believed the communications are likely to be linked to fraud and you are strongly advised not to respond to them in any way.
